This is the result of a mindset shift from 'prescribe and treat' which relies on authority and 'educate and involve' which relies on dispensing information, to a focus of 'advocate and inspire' to see the client in a whole-person way and build upon their self-efficacy. Wellness and health coaches assist with preventing disease, healing processes, reducing disease risk, and recovery from medical procedures. The client is assisted with focusing on making practical decisions about their next steps in life to achieve their vision and goals. Students can be referred to a wellness and health coach from our medical clinics and CAPS, as well as, make an appointment through Ed Mink, director of wellness and health promotion by calling 479-575-6376 or email edmink@uark.edu.
