HR Quarterly Newsletter

SUMMER 2010

Newsletter for Staff and Faculty at the University of Arkansas

Human Resources Staff

Two new staff members and one retiring member of the HR staff are changing the composition of Human Resources. Shelly Gahagans (pictured left top) began as the Nonresident Taxation Coordinator in December of 2009. She previously worked for Oklahoma State University -Tulsa and Oklahoma State University Center for Health Sciences in Tulsa. Shelly enjoys working with students and people from all over the world. She especially enjoys learning about family traditions and cultures and the sacrifice many of families make to send their children here for an education. And, she is still trying to learn how to call the HOGS properly!

Dawn Gillespie(pictured left center) began in the Benefits office as the Benefits Assistant on April 19, 2010. She can help guide employees through enrollment forms, make changes to insurance, retirement contributions and answer general questions regarding benefits. She moved to Fayetteville from Wichita, KS, where she was also a human resources specialist. The Dual Career Network helped her in her job search, and she is eager to meet employees.

Jim Wells (pictured left bottom), the Employee Development Program's Program Coordinator, retired on June 30. Jim had been with Human Resources for seven years. He began with the University of Arkansas System in February 2000 at the UA Agricultural and Cooperative Extension Service in Little Rock as an Administrative Assistant to the 4-H Foundation. He moved to Fayetteville and began work as an Administrative Secretary II for Human Resources on June 30, 2003 and then became Program Coordinator for the Employee Development Program March 1, 2004. Human Resources and the university community wish Jim a happy retirement.

Congratulations Employees of the Quarter!

The following employees received recognition in May for outstanding service and professionalism while working at the University of Arkansas (pictured in order):

Ena Bolden: Academic Counselor, Upward Bound/Pre-College Programs, Professional/Non-faculty/Academic

Alexandra "Ali" Williams: Project/Program Specialist, Fulbright Arts & Sciences, Professional/Non-Faculty/Administrative

Linda Komlos: Administrative Specialist III, Arkansas Community Design Center, Secretarial/Clerical

Jack Pages: Computer Operator I, Campus Card Office, Technical/Paraprofessional

Charles Cummings: Institutional Bus Driver, Transit, Skilled Crafts/Service/Maintenance

Congratulations to all of these winners! Each winner received a certificate and a monetary award at the ceremony. Winners of the Employee of the Quarter will also be submitted as candidates for the Employee of the Year. For more information, please visit the Staff Senate's Employee of Quarter page.

2010 Staff Senate Picnic

The 12th annual Staff Appreciation picnic was hosted by the Staff Senate on May 20th, 2010, featuring hotdogs, burgers, a vendor fair, door prizes, and special guest servers like Bobby Petrino, Chancellor Gearhart, and John Pelphrey. An estimated 1200 University of Arkansas staff were treated to a variety of foods and door prizes, many donated by local businesses. Volunteers from administration and Athletics helped make this yet another successful picnic, and the Staff Senate greatly appreciates all of their support and the support of the businesses of the city of Fayetteville. This event helps honor the staff who work all year long to make the University of Arkansas a world class institution.

UNIVERSITY OF ARKANSAS

Case Awards for University Relations Employees

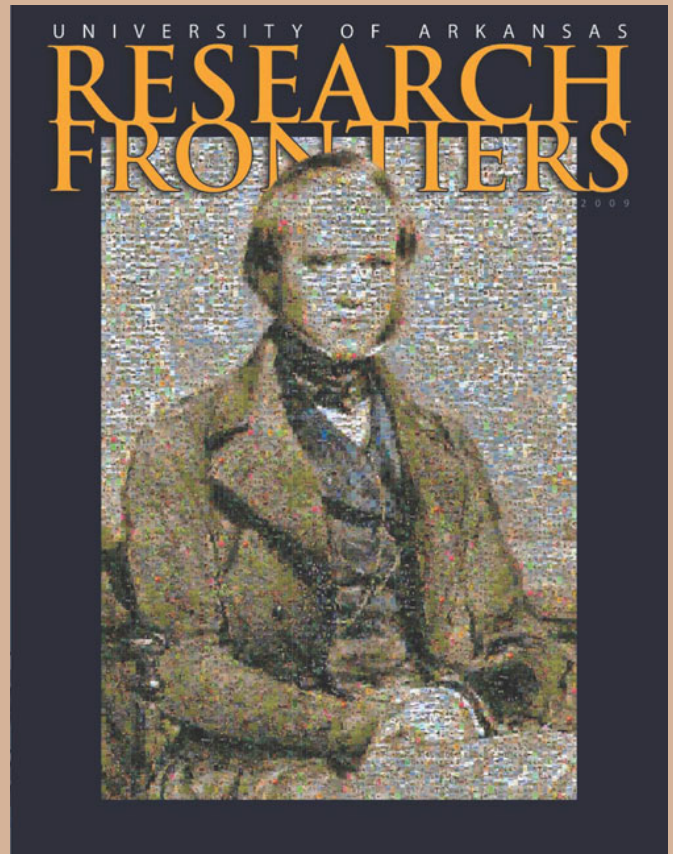

University Relations employees received three Special Merit Awards from the Council for the Advancement of Secondary Education, which were presented at the CASE III conference in Tampa, Florida.

Research Frontiers, a twice-yearly publication by the science and research communications unit, won in the category of Other Magazines. The Research Frontiers team includes Melissa Lutz Blouin, director of science and research communications; Barbara Jaquish and Matt McGowan, science and research writers; Eric Pipkin, creative director; Russell Cothren, photographer.

A Research Frontiers feature won in the Multimedia category for the print and Web story "From Damascus to Secaucus: Doing the Arab-American Feminists Dance" with its accompanying video of English professor Mohja Kahf reading her poem "Fayetteville as in Fate." The team responsible includes Barbara Jaquish, science and research writer; Eric Pipkin, creative director; William Gisler, manager of video productions; and Weyam Ghabdian, photography intern.

The graphic design team of Roy Cordell, Eric Pipkin, Amanda Ryan and Laura Bennett won a Special Merit Award in the category of Graphic Identity Programs for the redesign of the university logo.

The Razorbug TV advertisement received a bronze award from the Association of Communicators in Education. Those responsible are William Gisler, manager of video productions; John Cooper, video production specialist; and Roy Cordell, director of creative services.

Sustainability, EcoLogical Communities, and Earth Aid

Submitted to Community Capital Management for publication in their Healthy Communities Newsletter, September 2010 issue

Sustainability is not just for Fortune 500 corporations anymore! Sustainability is for cities and schools, churches and charities, and ultimately households. "Sustainability is a community obligation and a community building opportunity," according to Michele Halsell, the creator of EcoLogical Communities. EcoLogical Communities is founded on the principle that everyone can make a difference, and that when we each do our part and add it all up, collectively we can make a BIG difference. The program was launched in Fayetteville, Arkansas on April 22, 2010, the 40th anniversary of Earth Day.

EcoLogical Communities starts with a city dashboard that reports the amount of electricity, natural gas and water used to sustain the city during the previous year. It then asks each participant to make a pledge to reduce their own use of these important resources.

Participants are encouraged to set up their own personal dashboard to track their energy and water use. The personal dashboard is powered by Earth Aid, a Washington DC start-up. Participants can see all of their utilities in one place for the first time and also see how they compare to local, state and national averages.

"Seeing how you stack up against your neighbors can be very motivating," said Halsell. "Normally, you only see your own utility bill and you have no idea if your utility bill is low or high. With this program, you can see if you are above the average for households in your area. Once people see their numbers in context, they get to work trying to improve their performance. We are naturally competitive, and in this case, competition is good!" The program not only tracks individual savings of kilowatt hours or gallons of water, it also tracks and reports money saved on utilities and rewards participants with points that they can spend at local businesses.

Similar to a United Way campaign, only in reverse, EcoLogical Communities is recruiting local employers and community groups to participate. "Instead of raising money, we are reducing kilowatt hours," said Halsell. Each group, whether an employer or a church, a school or a civic organization, can establish their own group in the program and track their collective contribution to the city's overall goals. For example, there is a group for University of Arkansas employees. The group has 11 members who have already saved 52,000 gallons of water. "Just imagine how much water and energy we could save if everyone participated," said Halsell.

Visit www.ecologicalcommunities.org to see the city's dashboard and make a pledge, or go to www.earthaid.net to set up your own dashboard.

The Clean Air on Campus Act of 2009 was passed by the Arkansas State Legislature and signed into law by Governor Mike Beebe in March of 2009. The law recognizes that non-smokers often "receive damage to their health from the smoking of tobacco by others; and that smoking either directly or indirectly, is a major cause of preventable disease and death." The law goes on to state that "Beginning on August 1, 2010, smoking is prohibited on each campus of state-supported institutions of higher education." Penalties stipulated in the legislation state that "any person who violates any provision of this... is guilty of a violation and upon conviction shall be punished by a fine of not less than one hundred dollars ($100) no more than five hundred dollars ($500)."

In response to The University of Arkansas Tobacco Free Campus Policy, the Pat Walker Health Center developed a tobacco cessation program involving one-on-one behavior change counseling. The Health Center can also make referrals to the Community Clinic in Springdale where committed quitters can receive free prescriptions for pharmaceutical products. Research on quitting success has found that a combination of behavior change counseling, along with a pharmaceutical aid, is the most effective strategy. But...please remember that the bottom line for success is that the smoker must truly want to be free!
