Events:

Now – Saturday Apr. 1:

- Housing – RecycleMania, the annual competition promoting recycling and waste reduction, is under way and ends on Saturday, Apr. 1. The competition is happening on two levels: between our residence halls on campus and between other university campuses nationwide. Recyclable items will be collected from the halls and then weighed. Points will then be given to each hall's recyclable items (adjusted depending on the size/population of the hall) with points being deducted for contaminated items. The winning hall will win a prize at the end of the competition. Walton Hall was the 2016 on-campus RecycleMania winner.

Dining Services:

- LifeStyles Luncheon Support from Chartwells – Diversity and inclusion aren't always about racial or cultural differences. People with disabilities are also valuable part of a diverse community and strong work force. Since 1998, Chartwells at the University of Arkansas has employed associates from Life Styles. The Life Styles organization works closely with Northwest Arkansas companies – including Chartwells, Walmart and others – to find just the right employment fit for hundreds of people with disabilities each year.
- Every year Chartwells donates the food, culinary, and service for the annual event. Chicken for the entree was donated by Tyson. Four Chartwells associates were recognized in the awards ceremony for years of service. Chartwells at the University employs approximately 14 associates from LifeStyles. Many of these workers have maintained their positions for as many as 15 years. Chartwells is proud to represent the University of Arkansas through partnership with and continued support of LifeStyles. The dining service looks forward to many more years of providing opportunities for people with disabilities.
